Citations

A citation reference is the source of a link to the citation, and the citation is given a link back to it. That makes the reference the destination of a link as well as the source of one, and the identifier it is reached by is minted by the transformation rather than written here – which is why a failure names something like “id1” that appears nowhere in this file.

The behaviour is described in the datasheets [\[DS1\]](#) and [\[DS2\]](#).
